here are homes that shelter. And then there are homes that move you. From the moment you pass through the entrance, a private, landscaped arrival court framed by ancient olive trees and aromatic herbs, you sense that this villa was conceived not merely to be lived in, but to be deeply felt. The scent of lavender and rosemary in the air, the whisper of water nearby, the way the light falls differently here than anywhere else: it announces itself as something exceptional before a single door has been opened. Set on a generous 1,200 m² plot, this newly built villa is a rare act of architectural poetry — one that converges the warmth of Mediterranean tradition with the precision of contempor...
